

Although the Conservatives continue to focus their attack ads on Justin Trudeau and the Liberals (the Toronto Star believes they know the reason - a link to the item is below), the NDP has been getting a bit more media attention, particularly from pundits and commentators. Most of the focus is on the fact of the Orange surge in the polls, but there are some efforts to explore other angles from the 'Angry Tom' story to the performance of NDP provincial governments as a signal of how a federal NDP administration might behave.

Mr. Mulcair is being asked to explain his position on the Energy East pipeline, given a Canadian Press report last year that 'a west-east pipeline is the cornerstone of the NDP leader's energy policy' and a social media post last week saying 'It's official, Thomas Mulcair and the NDP say NO to Energy East'. It is understood that the NDP have a tough balancing act to maintain their support in Quebec but also appeal to Canadian voters elsewhere. One item in the NDP policy book that should be challenged is Mr. Mulcair's push for a $15 minimum wage. This would lead the average Canadian trying to get by on Walmart Wages that an NDP government would get them a significant lift in pay. But the fact is that the NDP proposal would apply only to workers in federally-regulated jobs, and some have estimated there might be only 400 to 500 of them who might benefit. Almost all minimum wage workers in Canada are covered by provincial regulations and would not see any benefit from an NDP government.

Forum Research did some interesting work on the issue of the Senate, finding that 56% of those surveyed would switch their vote to a party promising to abolish the senate. The only party promising this is the NDP. Forum would have us believe that it's only necessary to promise this...not to actually do it, which the NDP could not do because it clearly does not have enough of the required provincial support for such a move. More Orange smoke blowing...

Meanwhile, our Conservatives friends are busy today rolling out their $3 billion in cash being sent to families with children. It's interesting to note that they are now portraying this in part as a boost to the economy, which has all but slipped into recession. Under the category of 'we should have expected it', Tory cabinet minister Pierre 'Skipper' Poilievre did some photo ops to promote the child benefit payments all decked out in a Conservative Party golf shirt. He is now being investigated by the Treasury Board to see if he broke the rule that says "[government] institutions must not participate in, or lend support to, partisan events organized for political party purposes." An analysis of the flow of this $3 billion show the lions' share going to Conservative ridings and, of the top 17 recipient ridings, eight are in Alberta.

Justin Trudeau will be back in Metro Vancouver later this week with a Thursday-noon keynote speech to the Richmond Chamber of Commerce on the issue of 'fairness' in government policy. The fairness aspect is all about programs that do not spread benefits equally across all income brackets, as do Conservative and NDP initiatives, but rather promote 'equity' by channelling benefits to those who need them.

Our messages to the public:

Justin Trudeau presents new plan for middle class Canadians

The Bank of Canada has confirmed what Canadians have known for a long time: Stephen Harper's plan has failed, and the economy is not working for middle class Canadians. They are working longer and harder just to make ends meet.

After a decade under Harper, it is time for new leadership and a new plan. Justin Trudeau has a plan to create jobs, economic growth, and strengthen the middle class.

Harper's economic record:

The Harper plan has failed - the Bank of Canada said Canada has been in a recession this year.

Canadians have faced seven years of budget deficits, stagnant incomes, and rising debt and unemployment. Unemployment last year - including youth unemployment - was still higher than before the recession.

Stephen Harper's priority is a $2 billion dollar tax break for the rich, and 85 percent of Canadians will never see a dime.

Middle Class Tax Cut:

A Liberal government will cut taxes for the middle class. That's a $3 billion tax cut for those who need it the most.

We will ask the top one percent to pay a little more so the middle class can pay less.

Liberals will cancel Mr. Harper's income splitting and other tax breaks for the wealthy (but will keep pension splitting for seniors!). We will introduce a new tax bracket for the top one percent - on incomes over $200,000.

Canada Child Benefit:

The Liberal plan will also create one bigger, fair, tax-free, monthly cheque to help families with the high cost of raising their kids.

With the Liberal plan, a typical two parent family, with two kids, earning $90,000 per year will get $490 tax-free every month.

With Mr. Harper, the same family only receives around $275 after-tax. That's $2,500 more help, tax-free, over the course of a year with the Liberal program.

With the Liberal plan, a typical one parent family, with one child, earning $30,000 per year will get $533 tax-free every month. With Mr. Harper, the same family only receives around $440 after-tax.

On the federal government's deficit:

After what the Bank of Canada announced, Canada is likely still in a deficit under Stephen Harper.
